Days 1-3 Precipitation Forecast

Thursday Friday Saturday

A series of storm systems will move through extreme northern CA through late Sunday

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A series of frontal systems will bring periods of rain from this evening through Sunday. Dry weather will return early next week.

Medford Weather:

A gradually lowering mid-level cloud deck associated with an upper level disturbance should preclude fog development in most areas, but low clouds still may affect a few of the deeper valleys. High temperatures today will be about 5-10 degrees above normal area wide.

Reno Weather:

A series of weak upper level disturbances with bring a moist onshore flow into far northern California into the start of the weekend. This will bring the potential for rain and snow north of Portola to Gerlach Friday and Saturday along with an improvement in air quality.

San Francisco Weather:

High pressure over California will flatten out today and by Friday morning a very weak weather disturbance may bring light amounts of rain to the North Bay counties. High pressure will rebuild over the state for dry and mild weather next week.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Dry conditions with locally dense morning Valley fog can be expected today. There is a chance of precipitation tonight into Monday, mainly north of the Interstate 80 corridor. Dry weather expected Tuesday through Thursday.

Hanford Weather:

A ridge of high pressure will bring dry weather, mostly clear skies, and milder than normal afternoon temperatures to the Central California interior through Martin Luther King Jr Day. Areas of dense fog can be expected each night and morning in the San Joaquin Valley

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Weak to moderate offshore flow will continue through at least Saturday which will keep temperatures mostly above normal. A cooling trend is expected early next week with onshore breezes.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure and offshore flow will maintain warm and dry weather for the remainder of the week. Temperatures will remain above average through early next week, but higher clouds will be increasing and a shallow marine layer may return to coastal areas at that time. There is little to no chance for precipitation through next week.

Southeast California Weather:

High pressure building over Southeastern California will bring dry conditions and a slow warming trend through at least the early part of next week. A cooling trend is possible by the middle of next week as low pressure begins to move back inland.
